

Checklist when Creating Resources to Help Youth-Supporting Professionals Address Adolescent Sexual and Reproductive Health

Activate created a Wish List of strategies for creating resources for youth-supporting professionals who work on behalf of youth with experience in the child welfare system, the justice system, youth experiencing homelessness, and/or opportunity youth. If you are somebody who creates resources for youth-supporting professionals, we hope you incorporate these strategies into your work. Throughout the resource creation process, use the checklist below as a guide for assessing whether the strategies have been incorporated into your resource.

If you are a youth-supporting professional looking for resources, use this checklist to determine whether existing resources apply these strategies. For more information about each strategy, see the full Wish List.

- Uses a foundation of research and evidence
- Engaged young people in its creation
- Prioritizes an audience
- Created opportunities for collaboration between resource developers, researchers, youth-supporting professionals, and young people
- Uses an engaging format
- Integrates trauma-informed approaches
- Considers a broad range of topics related to adolescent sexual and reproductive health